

SEXUALITY AND PERSONS WITH AUTISM & DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES

Sexuality is a normal, though complicated, part of all human life. Issues of sexuality education for persons with Autism and Developmental Disabilities can seem even more complex and overwhelming to consider.

Attendees of this session will engage in a thoughtful and honest discussion of issues related to sexuality and developmental disabilities, and receive information on best practice approaches to sexuality education for persons with Autism and developmental disabilities. Participants will leave with a framework of understanding on which to approach the topic in their respective settings.

This session is open to teachers, parents, psychologists, case managers, and any other educational or health-care professionals that provide direct service and instruction to persons with Autism and developmental disabilities.

PRESENTED BY Christine Peterson Ph.D.

Christine Peterson is an Assistant Professor of Pediatrics at Strong Center for Developmental Disabilities, part of the University of Rochester School of Medicine and Dentistry, where she has provided service on behalf of persons with Autism and developmental disabilities since 2002. She has worked and taught in the field of developmental disabilities throughout her career as a direct-care provider, educator, school psychologist, and consultant. She conducts research and training, both regionally and nationally, in the areas of social and life skills instruction, best practice approaches to instruction, and transition issues for persons with Autism and developmental disabilities.
